

Gain Creators

Just like pain relievers, gain creators are the features of the product or service that create benefit for the customers. The process of consumption and purchase also influences how the gain creators are delivered and perceived. Gain creators will decide if the customer is delighted, merely satisfied, or not impacted by the consumption of the product. Gain creators ultimately get benefits to the customer that they are looking for.

All the gains required by a customer cannot be created. Some gains are higher on priority and the corresponding gain creators are therefore higher in terms of value. Companies should address the most important gain and create what is called a 'minimum viable product' and then add features to it with time to cater to other gains.

For instance, when purchasing a house,

A minimum viable product is an apartment that is safe, built of good materials, has a neat design, and has adequate parking.

other features may be added along the way after the hygiene factors are taken care of.
