

Entrepreneurs/Investors must identify the activities that are most critical for the success in the industry. Companies that do this activity well, should excel in the industry.

At the company level, the value chain analysis helps better understand the activities that lead to competitive advantage. One can begin with the generic value chain and then identify the relevant activities that are specific to that company only.^[2]

Porter's Value Chain

A more detailed value chain that can be used to industries as well as companies. This gives a more holistic view of the list of activities.
