

How to schedule calls on WhatsApp?

The pandemic has transformed our workspaces from physical offices to virtual ones, teaching us that meetings can happen anywhere. As a working professional, you've likely found that setting up virtual meetings and waiting for confirmations can be a time-consuming process.

WhatsApp, a go-to app on most people's phones, includes a feature called "Events" that simplifies scheduling. This feature allows you to schedule calls directly within WhatsApp, making it easier to set up virtual meetings without juggling multiple apps. If this sounds like a game-changer, here's a step-by-step guide on how to schedule calls on WhatsApp.

How to schedule calls on WhatsApp?

- Step 1: Open WhatsApp on your phone.
- Step 2: Go to the group where you want to schedule the call.

- Step 3: Tap on the paperclip icon in the message bar and click "Event".
- Step 4: Now select "Create Event," enter the event name and set the date and time.

- Step 5: Turn on the toggle if you want the meeting to be held via link and tap the "Send" icon.

And you've skipped the long process of creating external links for Microsoft Teams, Google Meet, and Zoom meeting rooms. Now, once you have scheduled the meeting in any WhatsApp Group, all members of that group will receive a notification to join the call at the scheduled time.

This WhatsApp feature "Event" is only available for scheduling meetings in groups, you cannot schedule with your contacts. But, don't worry, there is an alternative feature called "Call Link" that lets you create a call link and send it to your contacts.

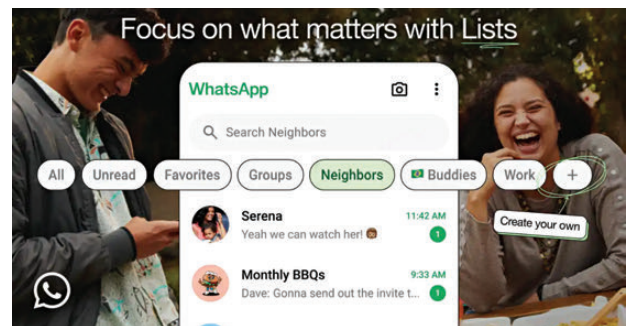

How to organise WhatsApp chats with custom lists?

Whatsapp has become an essential app for keeping us connected—whether it's chatting with friends, staying in touch with family, or coordinating with colleagues. But with so many conversations happening at once, managing all those messages can quickly get overwhelming. If you find yourself missing important chats because of too much clutter, WhatsApp's new "Custom Lists" feature could be just what you need. This feature lets you organise your chats into personalised filters. Ready to get organised? Here's a step-by-step guide to setting up custom lists on WhatsApp.

How to create custom lists on WhatsApp

- Step 1: Open WhatsApp on your phone.
- Step 2: Swipe down to see the filter bar.
- Step 3: Tap the "+" button.
- Step 4: Now, type the list name such as "Friends".
- Step 5: You can now add both groups and one-on-one chats to that list.

You can follow the same process and create other custom lists such as for family, workspace and anything you want. And, you are done with organising your WhatsApp chats.

Things you should know:

- As this feature has rolled out very recently, you may not have received this update but WhatsApp claims that it'll be available for every user within a few weeks.
- You can add both groups and one-on-one chats to your custom lists.
- For renaming and deleting any list, you just have to just tap and hold the list.

In our opinion, WhatsApp's new "Custom Lists" feature is a game changer for anyone who finds it challenging to keep track of their messages amidst the constant flow of notifications. d
