

OLED TV

Pixel-perfect magic

Mini LED technology has made remarkable strides in 2024, narrowing the gap with OLEDs by offering incredible brightness and contrast control. However, when it comes to rendering dark HDR scenes or capturing the delicate nuances of facial expressions, OLED TVs remain unmatched, thanks to their pixel-level brightness control. This year, OLED TVs have seen significant advancements in brightness and durability. Their high contrast and impactful HDR performance enable an exceptional cinematic experience. Let's take a closer look at the best OLED TVs of the year that have claimed the prestigious Digit Zero1 Awards for their outstanding performance and features.

Winner and Best Buy: LG OLED evo AI G4 55-Inch 4K Smart TV

The LG G4 OLED TV is an extremely accurate TV out of the box that narrowly surpassed the Samsung S95D for the Best OLED TV 2024 Zero1 Award. With its innovative Brightness Booster Max technology, the G4 delivers a high peak brightness of up to 2100 Nits, making HDR content very impactful. The self-lit OLED Evo panel ensures perfect blacks and vibrant colours, offering an impressive viewing experience. Gamers will be delighted by the TV's support for NVIDIA G-Sync, AMD FreeSync, and a 0.1 ms response time, which guarantees smooth, tear-free gaming. Powered by the 9 AI Processor Gen6, the TV optimises picture and sound in real-time, delivering amazing details and immersion.

Runner-Up: Samsung 55-inch OLED S95D 4K Smart AI TV

Samsung S95D OLED TV emerged as a very close runner-up with its QD-OLED panel that helped it achieve high peak brightness without sacrificing colour volume. The TV also stands out for its innovative glare-free screen, allowing for vibrant viewing even in brightly lit rooms. Its advanced NQ4 AI Gen2 processor enhances picture quality, offering customisable settings for enthusiasts and user-friendly automation for those who prefer simplicity. The TV also provides capable AI upscaling and top-of-the-line gaming features. On the downside, the TV is missing Dolby Vision support.
