

WHY DIVERSITY AND INCLUSION MATTERS

JAYA VAIDHYATHAN, BCT DIGITAL

Diversity and inclusion are fundamental to fostering a culture of innovation. For example, when tackling complex client challenges, our diverse teams have been able to develop unique, tailored solutions that would not have been possible with a more homogeneous group. By embracing different viewpoints, we can better understand the needs of our diverse client base. Currently, over 25% of our workforce are women and aim to reach 30% immediately and 40% within two years.

ANITA KAPOOR, LENOVO INDIA

At Lenovo, diversity and inclusion initiatives have been transformative. I take pride in building a team that belongs to different age groups, ethnicities, and genders. This enriches our team engagement and with our customers & clients. Across Asia-Pacific, including India, 29% of technical roles are held by women. By actively recruiting diverse talent and ensuring equal opportunities, we've seen a greater variety of perspectives, which has directly spurred innovation.

KRITHIKA BHAT, PURE STORAGE

At Pure Storage, diversity and inclusion are not just values – they are catalysts for innovation and business success. Our 'Inclusion Starts With You' course helps employees recognize the value of different perspectives and proactively address barriers to inclusion. This has strengthened our culture of innovation by encouraging fresh ideas and collaborative problem-solving. Additionally, our global patent program promotes inventor diversity by welcoming ideas from all corners of the company.

ARCHANA BAJAJ, PEGASYSTEMS

Diversity and inclusion are not just values; they are catalysts for innovation and growth. One of the most impactful initiatives at Pega has been our sponsorship programs for women leaders. By connecting them with executive leadership, these programs have provided invaluable exposure, opportunities, and learning experiences. As a result, we now see more women leaders globally driving strategic initiatives, having built strong networks and overcome barriers to leadership.

KALAVATHI GV, SIEMENS HEALTHINEERS

At Siemens Healthineers, diversity and inclusion fuel innovation by bringing varied perspectives to the table. We are also equally committed to gender equality at all levels, with a focused goal of increasing women in senior management and technical leadership roles. At DC India, about 30% of our workforce are women driving cutting-edge innovations.
