

How Platform Engineering Benefits AI Driven Radio Networks

The integration of artificial intelligence with platform engineering can transform radio frequency systems.

Radio frequency and antenna design have increased in complexity due to the evolution of radio networks, with telecom networks moving towards 6G and above. Today, network engineers work on repeated simulations and evaluate multiple design parameters with distributed teams so that error-free radio networks can be deployed with minimum call or signal drops.

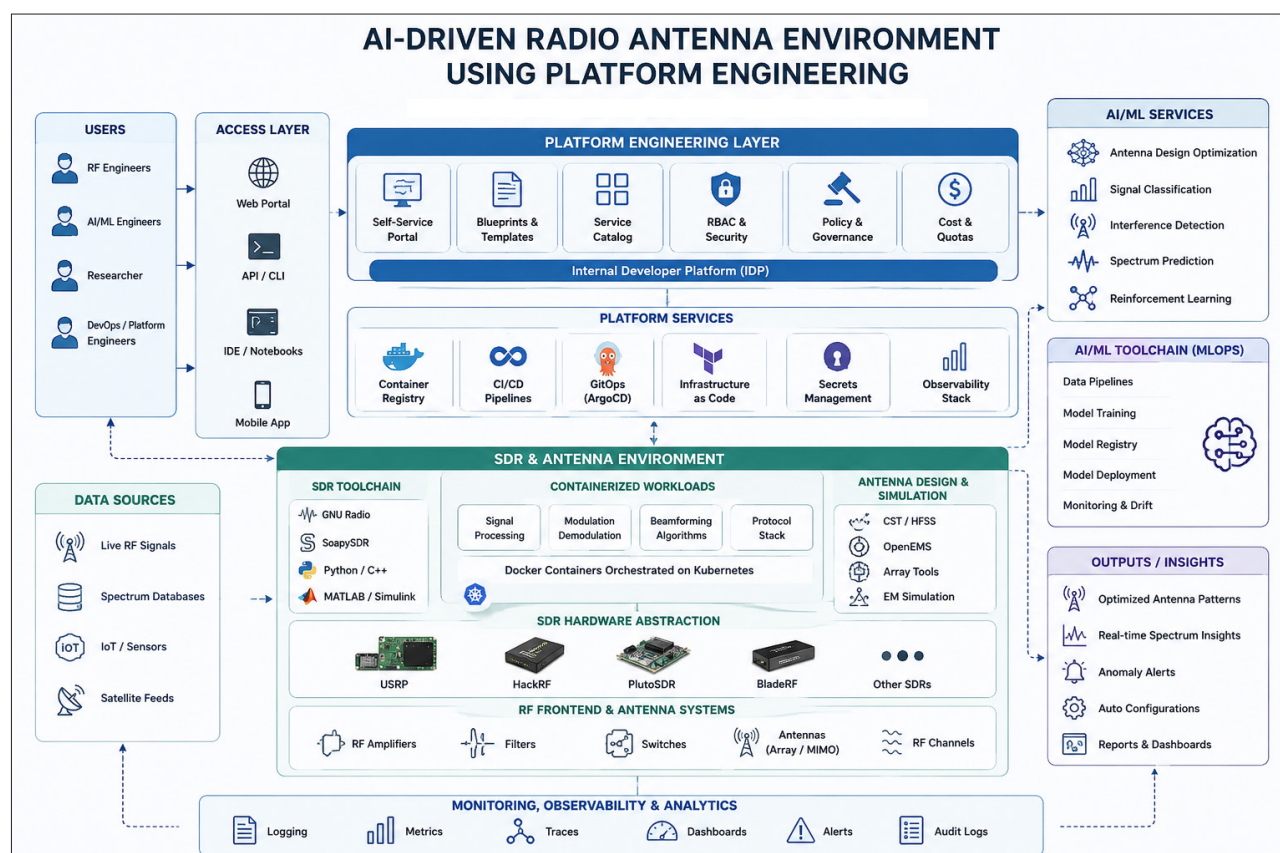

Figure 1: Platform engineering in radio networks and antenna design