

PLANNING THE END OF THE WAR

On March 28, 1865, President Lincoln met with his generals (from left) William T. Sherman and Ulysses S. Grant, and Rear Admiral David D. Porter on the River Queen, Grant's floating headquarters at City Point, Virginia. The talks covered the strategy for ending the war, as well as the terms of surrender. The artist George P. A. Healy immortalized the occasion in his painting The Peacemakers, and was indebted to his friend Sherman for its authenticity of detail.
