

Even then, some groups held out. Brigadier General Stand Watie, a Cherokee in command of the American Indian cavalry in Kirby Smith's army, only accepted a ceasefire on June 23. On August 2, the Confederate cruiser Shenandoah, which had been raiding Union ships in international waters, was in the Pacific when its crew learned of the capitulations. They continued to England, rather than a U.S. port, where they risked being tried for piracy. They surrendered in Liverpool on November 6. The crew dispersed, and the British later turned the ship over to the U.S. government.