

The Fifteenth Amendment

As a condition of their readmission to the Union, Southern states have to approve the amendment, ratified in 1870, that prohibits denying the vote to any citizen on grounds of race. But Southern governments rapidly find ways to prevent Black citizens voting.