

1867

MARCH

Nebraska is admitted to the Union, becoming the 37th state.

MARCH

Congress passes a Reconstruction Act, dividing the South into military districts and providing for new elections. The latter will establish state constitutions giving the vote to Black people.

MARCH

Congress also passes the Tenure of Office Act. This limits the president's ability to obstruct Reconstruction measures by changing officials whose appointment originally required approval by the Senate.

APRIL

The Senate approves the treaty for the purchase of Alaska from Russia, but the process will not be completed until 1868 when the House of Representatives approves the necessary payment.

JULY

Congress passes new Reconstruction laws increasing the powers of the military governors in the South. They are answerable to General Ulysses S. Grant as commander of the Army, and not to the president.
