

In their Footsteps

Testimony to the many men who fought during the Civil War are the numerous places that commemorate the war. Visitors have an opportunity to see the homes and headquarters of the military leaders, to witness the sites of historic battles, and to pay respect to those who lost their lives.

ALABAMA

Legacy Museum & National Memorial for Peace and Justice

These twin sites in Montgomery examine enslavement, segregation, and racial violence in the U.S. The outdoor memorial enshrines the names of more than 4,400 Black Americans who died by lynching following the Civil War while the interactive museum features first-person historical accounts.

<https://legacysites.eji.org>

ARKANSAS

Pea Ridge National Military Park

Preserves the site of the March 7–8, 1862, Civil War battle that led to the Union's total control of Missouri.

<http://www.nps.gov/peri>

DELAWARE

Fort Delaware

A Union fortress located on Pea Patch Island. The fort was built to protect the ports of Wilmington and Philadelphia but became home to hundreds of Confederate prisoners of war. Accessible via a ½-mile (0.8km) ferry ride from Delaware City.

<http://www.destateparks.com>
