

The 1850 Compromise

In Washington, Senator Henry Clay of Kentucky helps persuade Congress to accept a political compromise. It prevents an open split between North and South, but hardliners in both sections are unhappy with its measures. The Fugitive Slave Law will soon prove especially contentious.