

Josiah Gorgas, a native of Pennsylvania, was not a Southerner, but he had married the daughter of a former governor of Alabama. These connections helped lead him to choose the Confederacy.

Bullet mold and rifleman's tools

When ammunition ran out, blacksmiths or the soldiers themselves had to melt lead to make bullets on the spot, often collecting used rounds from the battlefield.