

Charles Francis Adams

President Lincoln appointed Adams as U.S. ambassador to Britain. His main tasks were to ensure British neutrality in the war and to try to limit British arms sales to the South.