

Bayonet charge

This Winslow Homer illustration shows an attack on an enemy line early in the war. On the left in the background, infantrymen advance in orderly ranks; in the foreground a bayonet charge develops into hand-to-hand fighting.

“I have seen pictures of battles—
they would all be in line,
standing in a nice level field fighting ... but it isn't so.”

U.S. PRIVATE WILLIAM BREARLEY, LETTER FROM ANTIETAM, SEPTEMBER
1862