

disabling the ironclad USS Carondelet and inflicting substantial casualties before taking refuge under the fortress's guns. This act of bravado was followed by the withdrawal of the Union ships in late July, conceding that for now Vicksburg could not be overcome.