

AFTER

Confederate efforts to reverse Union gains on the Mississippi failed, but Union forces found it difficult to make further progress.

ASSAULT ON BATON ROUGE

THE BATTLE OF BATON ROUGE

In late July, Confederate troops under John C. Breckinridge were sent to retake Baton Rouge with support from the ironclad CSS Arkansas and a river squadron. Breckinridge attacked on August 5 with some success, but his naval support never materialized, as the Arkansas suffered engine failure. Exposed to fire from Union gunboats, the Confederates withdrew.

ATTEMPTS TO TAKE VICKSBURG

Through the second half of 1862, efforts by Union General Grant to mount a land assault on Vicksburg were equally unsuccessful. The Confederate fortress at Vicksburg was not conquered until July 1863 (see The Vicksburg Campaign).
