

The Battle of Shiloh

The battle fought at Pittsburg Landing on April 6-7, 1862—and usually named for the nearby Shiloh Church—was by far the most bloody up to that point in the Civil War, leaving some 20,000 men dead or wounded. The insurgency came close to a major victory, but instead suffered another crushing reverse.