

threatened to cut Banks's line of communication. As his column raced to withdraw from Strasburg to Winchester, the Confederates attacked. With an extraordinary effort, Jackson's and Ewell's exhausted troops continued the fight until Winchester was taken.

Infantryman's boots

Hobnail boots were standard issue footwear for infantrymen. Known as brogans (from the Irish brogue) or Jefferson bootees, the nails gave the leather soles a better grip in the field.