

UNION MAJOR GENERAL (1822-92)

JOHN POPE

Born in Kentucky, John Pope made a career in the Corps of Engineers. In the Civil War, he commanded an Illinois brigade before leading the Army of Mississippi to victory at New Madrid in spring 1862. Transferred to the Army of Virginia he offended his new troops by comparing them unfavorably to Union soldiers in the West. He was not missed when sent to fight the Sioux after defeat at Second Bull Run. Pope served with distinction in the postwar army.
