

The death of Jackson

At the Battle of Chancellorsville, Confederate general Stonewall Jackson is shot by accident by his own troops. His death soon afterward leaves Lee without his most gifted lieutenant, an event recorded in history as a crucial moment in the Civil War.