

The Emancipation Proclamation

The Emancipation Proclamation of New Year's Day, 1863, transformed the nature of the Civil War and the Union war effort. Until then, for the United States, it had been a war to preserve the Union and to restore the rebellious states to their prewar status. Now it had also become a war for freedom.