

A general's great march

Stonewall Jackson led 33,000 men on his flank march. The tired men traveled many miles to the strike the enemy. One rebel noted, "I reckon the Devil himself would have run with Jackson in his rear."