

he led his Iron Brigade into position. Yet despite his death and savage casualties in the Iron Brigade, the Union forces pushed the Southerners back through McPherson's Woods and were poised to hold the ridges west of town.

The retaking of East Cemetery Hill

On July 2, the "Louisiana Tigers" Brigade overran the Union position on East Cemetery Hill. Peter F. Roethermel's The Repulse of the Louisiana Tigers (1866) shows Union troops rushing the hill and driving the Tigers off again.
