

AFTER

The loss of Vicksburg and the simultaneous defeat at Gettysburg made the South's demise almost inevitable, but the rest of 1863 did not see constant Union success.

CLEAR PASSAGE

Port Hudson, the last Confederate outpost on the Mississippi, fell on July 9. Unarmed Union ships could now sail from St. Louis to the sea.

JOHNSTON SLIPS AWAY

Johnston hoped to lure Union forces into a frontal assault against his prepared positions at Jackson. Instead, Sherman began encircling Johnston's army. On July 16, Johnston made a masterly withdrawal and escaped.

CHICKAMAUGA AND CHATTANOOGA

Union forces next went on the offensive in eastern Tennessee. Though they captured Chattanooga, they were defeated at Chickamauga in September 1863 and then besieged (see The Chickamauga Campaign). They were relieved only after Grant was appointed to command.

ENDURING CONFEDERATE SYMPATHIES

So humiliating was the capture of Vicksburg that it was not until the 1930s that its citizens again formally celebrated the 4th of July.

29,495

The number of Confederate troops who surrendered at Vicksburg. The two sides each lost about 10,000 killed and wounded in the campaign.
