

Establishing the "Cracker Line"

Union troops floated downstream from Chattanooga in flatboats under cover of darkness to drive off Confederates guarding Brown's Ferry. They then built a pontoon bridge that became a crucial link in the new supply line.