

AFTER

The failures of Sigel and Butler not only allowed Breckinridge and Beauregard to reinforce Lee, they also gave the Confederates another military advantage.

PETERSBURG DEFENSES

As a result of Butler's abortive raid on Petersburg, Beauregard began strengthening that city's defenses, just in time to parry General Grant's initial assaults on it the following week (see The Battle of Cold Harbor).

A NEW VALLEY CAMPAIGN

Another Shenandoah Valley campaign began in June after a raid by Union General David Hunter, in which he burned the Virginia Military Institute, the "hornet's nest," in retaliation for New Market. Lee sent General Jubal Early to confront Hunter, leading to a summer of battles culminating in Sheridan's victory over Early (see The Valley Campaign).
