

Techtember Madness

Techtember hit us like an annual tech hurricane, and as tradition demanded, Apple owned the spotlight! The iPhone 17 launch turned our office into a 24-hour war room, capped by a YouTube Live marathon where Yash and Sid fielded the hottest questions about Apple's latest arsenal.

The iPhone 17, 17 Pro, and 17 Pro Max strutted in like expected reunion guests, but the impossibly thin iPhone Air stole the show because Apple's engineers apparently looked at paper and thought, "too chunky." The Apple Watch Series 11, AirPods Pro 3, Watch Ultra 3, and their accessory entourage rounded out Tim Cook's annual "here's how we'll empty your wallets" buffet.

Abhishek's been circling the Series 11 like a hawk since day one, but the team has imposed a hilarious condition: he must publicly declare Max Verstappen as the GOAT before any wrist-based Apple products come his way. The standoff continues, with bets running on whether Apple addiction beats Formula 1 loyalty.

Meanwhile, Ayushi, Narendra, and Sparsh embarked on a golden Rajasthan adventure, putting Oppo's F31 series through desert stress tests. From scorching dunes to underwater dunks, tea spills to Coke baths, they pushed the phones into survival-expert territory – all in the name of scientific rigour.

This is what a successful edition of Digit MasterClass looks like. Of course, don't miss Mithun standing next to the stage in the background.

Yash's health-conscious transformation launched and crashed in just 24 hours, possibly a new office record for shortest-lived lifestyle changes. On a brighter note, Aman Rashid joined to drive our next growth phase, while Vasana returned as TV and Audio lead, giving Sid the kind of relief marathon runners feel crossing finish lines.

We also bid farewell to Yetnesh, our laptop guardian who transformed YouTube and Instagram gaming coverage during his four-year stint. His legacy lives on in every perfectly benchmarked frame rate and cooling test.

Manas jetted to Mumbai for business, followed by team dinner festivities. But when the WhatsApp photos rolled in, Sid wondered: "Where's the dancing? Where's the chaos?" Clearly, Delhi's wild celebrations have spoiled us – Mumbai's civilised dinner vibes just didn't pass his party meter.

Meanwhile, Jayesh met the wizards at Flipkart's Bengaluru HQ and Kolkata fulfillment centre, witnessing the staggering choreography of humans, machines, and tech that power your next online purchase. "Mind boggling" barely scratches the surface of the scale on display.

And Mithun pulled off another Digit MasterClass, the biggest yet. With an industry veteran sharing game development insights, the student-packed audience left buzzing. He's already plotting the next edition, even as he gears up for Zerol Awards madness.

As September winds down, festive season energy collides with Zerol Awards prep. The 2025 edition promises revelations, but first, we'll test whether our Techtember survival skills can handle October's brewing storms. [d]

Ayushi, Narendra and Sparsh did an awesome job of capturing Rajasthan's desert landscape