Samsung Galaxy S25 and S24 series get One UI 8.5

Samsung is preparing to roll out One UI 8.5 to its Galaxy S25 and Galaxy S24 series, bringing a refreshed design and smarter AI-driven features. The update will first arrive for Galaxy S25 users in South Korea on April 30, 2026, with a global rollout starting May 4. The Galaxy S24 lineup will follow soon after, receiving the update between late April and early May. One UI 8.5 introduces a new Liquid Glass design language with soft blur effects and floating interface elements for a more modern look. It also adds advanced AI features like call screening with live transcripts, contextual “Now Nudge” suggestions, a customisable quick panel, and a smarter gallery that automatically organises screenshots into categories, aiming to deliver a smoother and more personalised user experience. tinyurl.com/8sa0f8b

■ IOS FIXES

Apple iOS 26.4.1 update is here, it fixes a iCloud issue

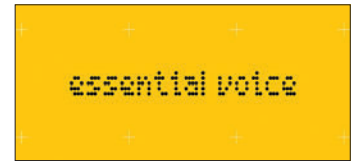

Apple has rolled out iOS 26.4.1 globally, focusing on fixing critical iCloud syncing issues linked to the CloudKit framework. The bug, introduced in iOS 26.4, caused delays and inconsistencies in syncing data across iPhones and iPads, affecting both third-party apps and Apple's own services like shared passwords.

Developers had earlier highlighted the issue, noting that only a system-level update could resolve it. With iOS 26.4.1, Apple has restored normal syncing behaviour, ensuring smoother data updates across devices. Users who faced these problems are advised to update their devices through the Settings menu. The issue was also present in iPadOS 26.4, though macOS Tahoe 26.4 remained unaffected. Looking ahead, Apple is expected to release iOS 26.5 in mid-May 2026. Already available in public beta, the update is set to introduce features like Suggested Places in Maps, search ads, and improved end-to-end encryption for RCS messaging. tinyurl.com/d7det4
