

Braille

Some blind people use a system called Braille to read and write. Different sets of raised dots represent letters and numbers.

This woman is learning sign language.

Semaphore flags

Semaphore is a system of signaling with hand-held flags. It is often used by ships at sea because the flags are easy to see from far away. The flags are held in different positions to signal letters and numbers.

1

2

3

4

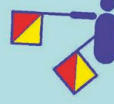

5

6

7

8

9

Sign language

As deaf people can't hear sounds, they can use sign language to communicate. Letters, numbers, and words can be shown using a variety of hand signs.