

Amazing find

The Lascaux cave paintings are about 17,000 years old. They were discovered by accident in 1940, when four teenage boys followed their dog into a hole in the ground. They rescued the dog and found the cave! The paintings show cattle, horses, and other animals painted in reds, yellows, and browns.

Cow painted in red ochre

Horse painted in brown ochre

Cave painting

Thousands of years ago, the first artists painted colorful scenes inside caves. Among the most famous paintings are those found in Lascaux in southwest France. Many of the paintings show animals that people hunted for food. Stone Age artists looked closely at the animals and drew them very carefully and accurately.

WOW!
Early people blew paint through hollow bird wing bones, making the first spray paint!