

Moment of glory

A Marine sergeant celebrates the US victory in the throne room of the Thai Hoa Palace, which miraculously survived the battle. All but 10 of the 160 structures that stood inside the Citadel prior to the Tet Offensive were destroyed.

Aftermath

Half the commercial quarter of the city lay in ruins, as did nearly all of the historic monuments in the Citadel. Casualties were immense on both sides: hundreds of American and ARVN troops and thousands of Viet Cong and NVA soldiers.

The toll on Hue's civilian population was also considerable. In addition to 800 civilians who died as a result of the battle, on February 26, the day after the battle ended, US and ARVN forces found the mass graves of around 3,000 civilians who had been massacred during the month-long occupation.
