

CLEMENTINE

Vehicle name "Clementine"

Some units allowed the naming of tanks after troops' sweethearts, while others used place names or the initial letter of the unit.

T37765

Serial number

The unique serial number issued to each tank remained with the vehicle, even if it was allocated to a new unit.

Reconnaissance tank

This tank, called Clementine (see above), saw action with A Squadron, 3rd Royal Tank Regiment, part of the 4th Armoured Brigade, in November 1942 at the beginning of the Tunisian campaign. By this stage of the war, the Stuart was being used as a reconnaissance vehicle, since German tanks and antitank guns could easily pierce its 1.49 in (38mm) frontal armor.
