

#3 Three decades, one magazine

In our previous response, we had uploaded our tryst with Digit. But to our surprise, we found a few pictures stored on a very old external drive today – some instances in pictures of how C-LIBZ (our IT Education & Business Centre) used to award meritorious students of a computer batch with Digit magazine. May we upload the same as memories of our love for Digit?

Digit has always kept us enlightened on the latest in IT technologies at C-LIBZ, and we wish Digit a great 25th anniversary. Way to go! Best wishes – we completed our own 30th anniversary on 29th April 2026.

– Simon Fernandes (Simraaj Fernkaar), Vasco da Gama

#5 A symbol of discovery

To me, Digit isn't just a tech magazine; it's a symbol of discovery, learning, and the excitement of staying connected to the ever-changing world of technology.

– Anupma Malhotra, Agra

#4 A source of joy

It's a source of joy for me. It has given me myself. I have started loving spending time with myself. It helps me heal. You're doing great – keep it up, and keep bringing new, innovative things just like you are doing.

– Aditya Anil Kotian, Mumbai

#6 A doctor's techie companion

Digit has been travelling with me since 2009 – with a cardboard sheet at the back, two or three booklets, and some CDs with mind-blowing techie stuff that inspired me towards technology and beyond. Digit was my study companion on my bus travels, as I used to buy it at book shops in bus stands at that time. Now I have made my home fully Google Assistant enabled, just because of Digit's company. I love Digit with my whole heart.

Digit made me what I am – everyone asks me how I am a doctor and yet know all this techie stuff. You all are really amazing. Keep rocking, Digit! (And do reduce the full-page ads, team Digit – we want more substance.) We are diehard fans of yours.

– Dr Balaji Shanmugasundaram, Namakkal