

Trophies, teamwork and chhole kulche

August arrived with stage lights, appliance trophies, farewell cake, a new face, an unexpected solo assignment, and enough chhole kulche to feed an entire event crew. If July was about showing up, August was about pulling together – because Digit's biggest moment of the month was also one of those rare occasions when almost everyone had a hand in making the thing work.

The centrepiece was DITAA 2026, Digit India's Top Appliance Awards, a new celebration of the brands and products shaping India's appliance industry. Months of planning, testing, coordination and problem-solving finally came together on awards night. For Digit, it wasn't just another event. It was a new chapter – built by a team that had spent months turning an idea into a show and a room full of applause. The test labs had done the heavy lifting. It was time for the people behind the spreadsheets and schedules to take a bow.

At the centre of that stage were Yash and Krishika. Co-hosting a nearly three-hour gala is the sort of assignment that can make even confident people reconsider life choices. The two, however, looked like they were enjoying. From the opening welcome to the vote of thanks, they kept the evening moving, handled the transitions, and made the whole thing feel easier than it was.

Of course, no great production runs purely on preparation. Sometimes it runs on chhole kulche. Just before showtime, with the venue crew already running for long hours, parcels arrived for the team. Plates were shared, energy levels recovered, and for a few minutes the final event scramble became a communal lunch break. Team spirit, occasionally, comes wrapped in foil. DITAA also produced one of Digit's stranger live experiments. Krishna transformed into Billu from Pritam Purra for a comedy act, with Narendra as his sidekick and Yash and Krishika attempting to rescue the show from the two. It was chaotic, theatrical and new – and judging by the laughs, worth trying.

The celebrations carried one bitter-sweet note. Madhav's brief but memorable Digit run came to an end, marked with a farewell cake and good wishes.

Almost on cue, Vikhyat arrived to strengthen Digit's appliance coverage. For him, joining Digit was a childhood ambition; now the bylines have already begun. The appliance beat loses one pair of hands and gains another.

Meanwhile in Mumbai, amid preparations for an office move, Vyom unlocked a meaningful achievement. With Mithun and Jayesh absent, he represented Digit solo at an internal event, interviewed delegates, worked the long shift and handled it all comfortably.

That was how August went. Big stage, bigger teamwork, a few goodbyes, and one new beginning. **📺
