In this chapter, I am going to use Renko Charting along with Candlestick Charting format for getting effective trading signals. Now, what are Renko charts and how do they differ from Candlesticks? I will get to this in a minute.

This trading setup can be used on any timeframe but I recommend using it on the 15-minutes time frame as it performs well on a 15-minute chart. I have tried to make this strategy as simple as it can be so that both novice and experienced traders can use it. Now, let us talk about the Renko Charts.

UNDERSTANDING RENKO CHARTS

Renko charts provide a different way of identifying price trends and reversals by cutting off noise from the price chart. Renko charts look like bricks that represent fixed price movements. For example, a 10-point Renko chart will have new bricks formed whenever the price moves 10 points.
