

Connecting agents to your apps and data

Give agents useful access without losing control

An AI agent without access to your information is like a brilliant assistant sitting outside your office door. It can offer advice, explain concepts and draft generic templates, but it cannot understand your actual work. The moment you connect it to documents, email, calendars, spreadsheets, project boards, code repositories or customer records, it becomes far more useful. It can stop speaking in generalities and start working with your reality.

This is where agents become exciting. A connected agent can read a meeting transcript, find the related proposal in Drive, check a spreadsheet for deadlines, draft a follow-up email and

