

Woman loses ₹1.94 lakh after clicking on a job-related link on Instagram

In today's world, many young people are on the lookout for flexible job opportunities that fit their schedules. However, not everything that glitters is gold, as a recent case highlights how one woman's search for a part-time job turned into a financial nightmare. Archana, a 25-year-old woman, was recently targeted in an online job scam that cost her Rs 1.94 lakh. Keep reading to know the full story. Archana was actively browsing online for part-time job options when she came across a link on Instagram that seemed to promise high earnings. The ad promoted work under the name "Amazon Freshers Job in India," which appeared legitimate at first glance. <https://tinyurl.com/3ae7tbsw>

Senior citizen loses over ₹1cr in low-interest loan scam

Financial scams are becoming increasingly sophisticated, with loan scams being a major concern. A disturbing case from Andheri, Mumbai, highlights the risks: a 70-year-old man lost more than Rs 1.1 crore to a low-interest loan scam that spanned almost a year. Find out how the scam unfolded and what you can do to avoid falling victim to similar financial frauds. The fraud began in October 2023 when the victim received a call from a man named Anil Yadav, who claimed to be an executive at a financial institution in Delhi. Yadav promised him a Rs 10-crore loan at a low interest rate, but with one condition that he had to buy a health insurance policy first. <https://tinyurl.com/2d27e48y>

Pune firm accountant falls for Whale Phishing scam

Imagine receiving a message from your boss, urgently asking for a large money transfer to close an important business deal. You'd probably act fast. But what if the message wasn't actually from your boss? That's exactly what happened to an accountant at a Pune-based engineering and design company, who unknowingly transferred Rs 1.9 crore to fraudsters posing as the firm's director. The accountant received a message on March 6 from someone pretending to be the director. The fraudsters even used the director's photograph as their profile picture on a messaging app to make the scam more believable. <https://tinyurl.com/48nhwyhx>

Retired officer falls victim to Facebook scam, loses ₹5 crore

A retired government officer from Navi Mumbai has become the latest victim of the Facebook ad scam. The 70-year-old man, who was randomly scrolling through his feed, came across a fake stock investment page. Tempted by the profiles and high gains, he filled in the details and slowly invested over Rs 5 crore to the fake application. According to reports, the retired officer saw a Facebook advertisement promoting stock investments. He contacted the page by providing his personal information, and in response, fraudsters contacted him via WhatsApp and asked him to join a 'A24KKR Collaborative Win' app link to become a member for trading, as confirmed by the police officer. <https://tinyurl.com/3m7y8z38>

Retired bank manager loses ₹20 lakh to fake stock experts

A shocking incident has come to light where a retired senior bank manager, Atul Sonkar, was scammed out of Rs 20 lakh by fraudsters posing as stock market experts. The fraud was carried out through a WhatsApp group, highlighting how even professionals can fall prey to such deceptive schemes. Atul Sonkar, 61, a former senior manager at Canara Bank, resides in Gopika Enclave Civil Lines. On September 23, 2024, he was added to a WhatsApp group by two individuals, Kruti and Ravi Agarwal, who introduced themselves as stock market experts. Along with them was another person, Namit, who provided stock analysis. The scammers built a sense of trust by promising high returns on investments in shares and IPOs. <https://tinyurl.com/d5c56ty8>
