

WazirX says 43 pct customers may not get their money back after $234mn hack

WazirX, an Indian cryptocurrency exchange platform, has revealed that customers are unlikely to recover all their funds following a massive $234 million hack in July. According to George Gwee, a director at Kroll, the restructuring firm working with WazirX, at least 43% of the funds held by customers may be permanently lost. <https://tinyurl.com/ypk95dtt>

Elon Musk's viral $20M crypto giveaway video is not what it seems

A new deepfake video of Elon Musk is making rounds on social media, leaving many confused and concerned. The video falsely claims Musk is hosting a $20 million crypto giveaway, further highlighting how scammers are using advanced technology to deceive people. The viral video shows Musk saying, "Here's a surprise for everyone. I'll be doing a $20 million crypto giveaway at Elon4u.com for one week starting on December 13." He even reassures viewers by adding, "If I am serious? Yes, go to Elon4u.com. It's just a few quick steps that shouldn't take longer than three minutes." <https://tinyurl.com/3s62y9ct>

Retired Lieutenant General loses ₹94,000 to hotel booking scam

Imagine planning a peaceful getaway only to fall victim to a scam while trying to confirm your booking. That's exactly what happened to a 76-year-old retired Lieutenant General who lost Rs 94,000 in a hotel booking fraud. Keep reading to know how the scam unfolded and how you can avoid falling for such frauds. It all started when the retired officer was trying to contact customer support for an online hotel booking platform. He had booked accommodation in Mussoorie for March 1 and needed to inquire about the tax payment for his stay. While searching online, he came across a phone number that seemed to belong to the booking portal's customer care. <https://tinyurl.com/ya3sece9>

Man loses ₹1.7 lakh to traffic challan scam, recovers partial amount by acting fast

Imagine getting a message about a traffic fine and clicking a link, only to lose a huge sum of money. That's exactly what happened to Arpit Halder, a 33-year-old private firm employee from Bengaluru. He recently fell victim to a fake traffic challan scam and lost Rs 1.7 lakh. However, his quick thinking helped him recover Rs 80,000. Keep reading to know the full story. On February 22, around 2 PM, Halder received a WhatsApp message from an unknown number. The message claimed that his two-wheeler had violated traffic rules on Kammanahalli Main Road. It included a link that appeared to be from the Parivahan portal. <https://tinyurl.com/5xx9jeen>

Noida woman loses over ₹51 lakh in stock trading scam

Imagine trusting someone with your hard-earned money, hoping for better returns, only to realise you've been scammed. That's exactly what happened to Meenu Rani, a resident of Greater Noida, who lost over Rs 51 lakh to a stock trading scam. Keep reading to know what happened and how to avoid falling for such scams. Meenu Rani filed a complaint, claiming that a man named Hari Singh convinced her to invest in the stock market, promising three to five times returns within a month. Claiming to have 15 years of experience, Hari gained her trust through a WhatsApp group. <https://tinyurl.com/5u4bbv86>