

3. Propose a 3-act story structure using these characters.”
You retain control; AI is a plot generator and sounding board.

Scene drafting:

“Here is a summary of my story so far: [paste].

Write a rough first draft of a scene where [X happens], focusing on [emotion / sensory detail / humour].

Keep dialogues natural and avoid clichés.”

Then rewrite it in your style. Over time, you can ask AI for only suggestions, not full scenes.

Journaling with AI: reflection, not surveillance

You don't have to share your most private thoughts, but AI can help turn scattered reflections into clarity.

Daily reflection template:

“Every evening, I'll paste answers to these questions:

- What happened today?
- How did I feel?
- What did I create or learn?
- What's bothering me?

When I paste it, please:

1. Summarise my day in 3–4 sentences.
2. Reflect back one thing I might be proud of.
3. Suggest one tiny creative action for tomorrow (e.g. write 5 lines of a poem, sketch for 10 minutes).”

This turns AI into a gentle creative coach embedded in your journal habit.

(Privacy note: avoid pasting highly sensitive personal data. Use pseudonyms or shorthand for anything you wouldn't tell a random stranger.)

4. AI-generated prompts for daily creativity

Some days, the problem isn't time – it's blank page syndrome. AI is phenomenal at generating constraints and prompts, which are exactly what many artists and writers use to get unstuck.

30-day writing or drawing challenge

Prompt to ChatGPT/Gemini:

“Act as a creativity coach.

I want a 30-day creative challenge for 2026.

Mediums I enjoy: [writing / sketching / photography / music, etc.].

Time available: [e.g. 20 minutes/day].

1. Create a 30-day calendar where each day has:
 - A one-line prompt
 - A small constraint (e.g. ‘no adjectives’, ‘only 3 colours’, ‘must use dialogue’).
2. Gradually increase difficulty over the month.

3. Make sure no two prompts feel too similar.”

Copy this into your notes or print it and stick it on your desk.

On-demand “idea mix” generator

When you want a weird creative mashup:

“Give me 10 strange prompt combinations for a short story

or comic, combining:

- A mundane object
- A technology concept
- An unexpected emotion

Example style: ‘A nostalgic toaster becomes self-aware during a software update.’”

Take one and build.

Repurposing prompts across mediums

You can also ask:

“Take these 10 writing prompts and turn them into:

- 10 drawing prompts
- 10 photography prompts
- 10 music prompts.”

That way, a single AI-generated list fuels multiple creative practices.

5. Explore image generation for visual hobbyists

If your resolution includes drawing more, learning design, or starting a visual diary, AI image generators can be your playground and reference machine.

DALL·E 3 via ChatGPT

DALL·E 3 is integrated into ChatGPT: you describe an idea in natural language, ChatGPT refines that into a detailed prompt