Alessandro Scarlatti

Domenico Scarlatti's father, Alessandro, was the leading Italian opera composer of his period. Born in Palermo, Sicily, in 1660, he spent most of his working life in Naples, where he was appointed maestro di cappella at the Viceregal Chapel; he also worked in Rome, Florence, and Venice. His output was phenomenal, including more than a hundred operas as well as a host of oratorios and cantatas. His most highly regarded work is Il Mitridate Eupatore, first staged in 1707. Heavily in debt, he died in Naples in 1725.
