

PIANO CONCERTO NO. 1

Chopin composed this concerto in 1830 and was the soloist at its first performance on October 11. He was immediately celebrated as a national hero in his native Poland.

The young Frédéric had a weak constitution and although he grew to average height for the time, he remained very slight in build and suffered ill health throughout his life. From an early age, he showed musical interests, in which he was encouraged by his loving, cultured family: he began serious piano lessons when he was six, had his first
