

1872

A performance of the Mass in F minor is Bruckner's first Viennese success, impressing Brahms and Liszt, among many others.

1884

Arthur Nikisch conducts the triumphant premiere of Bruckner's Seventh Symphony in Leipzig.

1886

Played by the Vienna Philharmonic under Hans Richter, the Seventh Symphony is again a great success, although some press reviews are vitriolic.