

ALEXANDER BORODIN

Borodin worked on his magnum opus, the opera Prince Igor—a forceful depiction of medieval Russia—for almost 18 years. However, he wrote music only as a hobby: he was a chemist by training and is said to have been one of the first scientists to link high cholesterol to heart disease.