

probably in love with Clara and after Robert died in 1856, many people, including Clara herself, expected Brahms to propose. However, he hated the idea of being tied down, and his ardor turned into a devoted lifelong friendship with Clara. Later in life, Brahms had dalliances with several other women (he was particularly susceptible to beautiful singers), but he always drew back when marriage seemed likely and remained a lifelong bachelor.

REMENYI AND BRAHMS

In 1850, Brahms met the talented violinist