

IN PROFILE

Joseph Joachim

Among Brahms's many musician friends, one of the most important was Joseph Joachim (1831–1907), the leading violinist of the day and a composer of some distinction. Brahms wrote several works with Joachim in mind, including his Violin Concerto. Their friendship was ruptured in 1883 when Brahms supported Joachim's wife in the couple's divorce proceedings. However, Brahms made a successful gesture of reconciliation when he wrote his Double Concerto (for violin and cello) for Joachim and his string quartet colleague Robert Hausmann.

JOSEPH JOACHIM

Move to Vienna

Over the next decade, Brahms moved around a good deal. He