

Nordraak, whose passion for Norwegian folk music, combined with his patriotic zeal, made a deep impression on Edvard: “Suddenly, it seemed as if a mist fell from my eyes and I knew what I wanted.” Nordraak died from tuberculosis at age 23—Grieg composed a funeral march in his honor—but his influence lingered.