

NADEZHDA VON MECK

In the early 1880s, Debussy worked as a pianist for the wealthy Russian businesswoman and art-lover Nadezhda von Meck. She became famous as the patron of Tchaikovsky.

The world of art

Debussy's style was also shaped by factors outside the world of music. From as early as 1887, his work was described as Impressionist—a label that stayed with him. The reference was initially made by one of his assessors at the Conservatoire and
