

posterity. In 1932, a commission from the BBC led him belatedly to resume composition, working on a Third Symphony, but it was never completed. Elgar died of cancer in 1934 and was buried alongside his beloved Alice in the village of Little Malvern in Worcestershire.

COCKAIGNE OVERTURE

Elgar's Cockaigne Overture ("In London Town"), 1900–1901, written for full orchestra, offers a lively and humorous portrait of London and its inhabitants. The cover of the score is shown here.