

(see box). Devoting all her efforts to the cause of women's suffrage, Smyth composed a stirring march that was used by the suffragettes at their rallies in London.

“THE MARCH OF THE WOMEN”

The song sheet for Smyth's inspirational anthem—incorporating the suffragette colors of purple, green, and white—shows women and girls of the WSPU.

Imprisonment and acclaim

After addressing a demonstration in Trafalgar Square in 1912, Smyth was arrested and imprisoned for breaking the windows of
